COMMUNICATIONS

All Directors, Officers and Employees are required to report violations of our Program or any applicable law to the Senior Executive team. This section outlines the communication protocol from inquiring more about a potential concern to reporting a claim and what happens after the claim has been reported. To complement this Program, the Senior Executive team has created separate reporting procedures outlining the protocol from reviewing a claim through conducting an investigation. The purpose of this section is to clarify any concerns or questions you may have regarding your communication options for reporting unethical activities.

Asking Questions

CWCO operates under an “Open Door” policy in which employees are encouraged to discuss any work-related problem with management at any time. In most cases, employees should talk to their manager first about any questions they may have regarding any aspect of our Ethics Program.

When you have questions regarding proper conduct in a particular situation, as it relates to our Ethics Policies, you should review the specific Ethics Policies or related sections of the Ethics Program and contact your manager or a member of the Senior Executive team.

We encourage you to seek guidance first from your manager for routine workplace issues that do not involve perceived violations of law or ethical conduct.

Determining What is an Appropriate Report

Employees are required to report any suspected violations of our Code of Business Conduct and Ethics or any of our other Ethics Policies. To further clarify violations of our conduct and ethics standards, and to assist you to determine what constitute genuine ethics concerns, the Senior Executive team created a listing of unethical actions that should be reported immediately, which is set forth in Attachment A to this policy.

Reporting a Violation

Any Director, Officer, Employee, consultant, vendor or affiliate of the Company who believes that he or she, or someone else, has been subjected to conduct that would constitute a violation of our Program must immediately report it.

In most cases, you should first speak to your manager if you have a concern or are aware of a possible violation. If you are not satisfied with your manager's response or if you are uncomfortable going to your manager with your report, you have other means of reporting a perceived violation:

- Contact a member the Senior Executive team.
- Call, email, or send a letter to the Ethics Officer.
- Send an anonymous letter to a member of the Senior Executive Team or Ethics Officer.
- Respond anonymously to the periodic ethics survey.

We encourage you to avail yourself of whichever method of communication you are most comfortable with. However, not reporting a perceived violation is unacceptable. We are committed to our non-retaliation policy and therefore have provided the anonymous options set forth above.

If you are a manager and have been approached by an employee with a potential report of a violation, you must contact a member of your Senior Executive team for further guidance.

Regardless of the method of communication you choose (verbal, electronic, handwritten, etc.), all reports must be recorded by the Ethics Officer. You can submit your report directly to the Ethics Officer, or to your manager or to your Senior Executive team. Whomever you reported to, will record the report of a potential violation upon receipt.

We expect that an employee reporting a potential violation will use his/her best judgment and common sense in assessing the validity of a potential ethical violation. All reports of potential violations are to be fact-based and respectfully worded. To assist in conducting a meaningful review, we request you provide as much detail as possible in your report.

The Report Management Process

Each report will be handled on a case-by-case basis. We recognize that each report is unique and may vary in complexity and time to assess. CWCO is committed to a timely response to each report.

Once a report is submitted, based on the report category, the respective Senior Executive team member will begin to gather facts regarding the report. The fact gathering process is a standard operating procedure and will be performed for all reports submitted. The purpose of the fact gathering process is to answer the basic question: What happened? The Senior Executive team will review the case and submit a report for the Ethics Officer to determine if an investigation needs to be conducted.

An investigation will be determined by the Ethics Officer based on the details of the initial complaint and the information obtained during the fact gathering process. If the decision is to proceed with an investigation, the investigation will be conducted promptly. The Ethics Officer will establish the members of the investigative team, who will vary based on the facts of each report. CWCO is committed to conducting fair, relevant and independent investigations.

To the extent appropriate, the individual filing a report will be kept apprised of the fact-gathering and/or investigative process. The individual filing the report will be notified when the report is closed with information, as appropriate, of the outcome.

Do not hesitate to contact your Senior Executive team with any questions or concerns.

Appointment of the Ethics Officer and Investigation Protocol

- a) The Ethics Officer shall be appointed by the Board from amongst the independent directors comprising the Board. His appointment shall be reviewed every five years.
- b) Where a conflict of interest arises in relation to a specific incident or investigation, the Ethics Officer may request the Board or the Board may on its own motion, appoint an alternate or further alternate Ethics officer from suitably qualified independent third parties.
